SMALL GRANT REPORTS:

ANNE M. MORGANSTERN (Department of History of Art) The small grant that I received from the CMRS last spring will help to pay for the illustrations of my book entitled Gothic Tombs of Kinship in France, the Low Countries and England, which is due to be published by Penn State University Press next fall. The book is a social history of one monumental tomb type erected in church sanctuaries in Northern Europe from the thirteenth through the fifteenth century. This is the first extensive treatment of the tomb of kinship, which characteristically displays an effigy of the deceased accompanied by representations of family members on the tomb chest that supports it. The book establishes the tomb of kinship as an important Northern European iconographic type and links it to Late Medieval intercessory prayer for the living and the dead, mnemonic systems, art patronage by women, the inheritance customs of advanced feudalism, and individual identity within the noble and bourgeois family. Monuments of special interest that are included are the tombs of Kings Edward II and Edward III of England, that of the latter’s queen, Philippa of Hainault, and those of two counts of Champagne, Henry the Liberal and Thibaud III, the grandfather of the poet prince, Thibaud le Chansonnier.

DANIEL REFF (Department of Comparative Studies) A grant from CMRS is making possible an interdisciplinary project involving myself (an anthropologist interested in Jesuit missions and discourse), Hanna Gotz (a recent Ph.D. in Spanish and Portuguese), and Robin Gill, a scholar of Japanese language and culture who has
My research involved examining all the extant manuscripts for a collection of sermons by Archbishop Arundel. I then went on to work on the history and development of the collection of sermons by Archbishops Arundel, 17th century clerics, and finally, Franciscan and Benedictine Churchmen. I had the opportunity to study the manuscripts kept in the library of the Bibliothèque Nationale, and in the Sealed Library of the Bodleian Library in Oxford.

In Buenos Aires, I worked at the library of the Bodleian Library at Oxford and the library of the John Rylands.

In the Duke University Library at Durham, North Carolina. I looked at the library of the Bodleian Library at Oxford and the library of the John Rylands.
